Leadership Training for Managers: 3 Day

In-Person

This is a course designed to help leaders learn the most effective ways to engage their teams so that they can drive innovation, meet corporate goals, and positively affect their bottom line.

What You'll Learn

You will learn the distinction between personal leadership and organizational leadership. Discover how to effectively communicate goals, develop effective training methods, hold your people accountable, recognize their successes with enthusiasm, and address mistakes with consideration. You will build a culture of engagement, recognizing innovation and human potential.

Why you want to learn it

Accomplished leaders know that engaging their teams is critical to the bottom line. To that end, a study conducted by Dale Carnegie Training and MSW/ASr found that teams that are enthusiastic, inspired, confident, and empowered, those four specific emotions are considerably more likely to be engaged in achieving the corporate goals. This course teaches leaders to develop their teams accordingly, empowering them to positively affect their bottom lines.

How it will help you

This is your opportunity to develop your leadership style, enabling you to grow within your organization. The course will make you proficient in problem solving and decision-making. But most importantly, it will help you to build a cohesive, effective team with members who are eager to meet and exceed your corporate goals!
